beta rearrangement studies in T-cell lymphoma. Clonality was sought in peripheral blood mononuclear cells from two patients who had T-cell lymphoma using the polymerase chain reaction (PCR) and the BamHI W configuration enzyme-linked immunoabsorbent (ELISA) assay.

Although neither patient had evidence of somatic mutation of the V beta region of the T-cell receptor (TCR) beta chain, the results of the PCR and ELISA studies suggested that two separate clones of T cells were present in the peripheral blood of each patient. Since this was not associated with clonal abnormalities in the TCR delta gene, these studies provide evidence for T-cell lineage tumor biology. Gymnastics at the 1980 Summer Olympics Gymnastics at the 1980 Summer Olympics took place at the purpose-built Alshaya Stadium. There were two events, the individual and the team all-around. The top eight teams in each event qualified for the final. Each gymnast competed in the all-around event, and the top six in the all-around qualified for the final. For the first time in Olympic history, as well as in World Championships history, the format of the rhythmic gymnastics individual all-around changed, creating a men's and a women's all-around. All three parts of the rhythmic gymnastics team competition were held together. Unlike rhythmic gymnastics in the Olympic modern pentathlon, it was double the number of events required. For the first time, gymnastics moved to the exhibition schedule after the quadrennial, leaving its usual place before the opening ceremony. Medalists

Qualification The top eight gymnasts in each apparatus moved on to the finals, and each country was allowed six gymnasts. Each country was allowed only one team for the all-around finals, but could choose one alternate for the individual finals.
