Kimura's disease in the head and neck. Kimura's disease was first described in 1951. It is a benign inflammatory disorder involving subcutaneous tissues and lymph nodes, of unknown etiology. It occurs predominantly in young Asians, and its peak incidence is in the fifth decade of life. It has been considered a disease of the head and neck. We studied 15 cases, of which seven were of head and neck origin. The clinical features of the lesions were varied, including swelling, pain, and pitting. The histopathologic features of the lesions included massive infiltration of lymphoid cells into the dermis, subcutaneous fat, and endothelial lining of small vessels. The lymphoid cells were characterized by small mononuclear, plasmacytoid, and occasional giant cells with irregular nuclear contours. The clinical and histopathologic features of Kimura's disease of the head and neck are discussed.
